Amanda, could you please make sure that this goes to all FMLC participants—trying to reply all—but all not listed in the cc.

Colleagues:

As promised, here are the background materials for the discussion next Friday afternoon at FMLC on the future of the Family Medicine Leadership Conference (FMLC 2.0...)

I'd propose these questions for discussion:

Four and half years ago, we revised the "working party" to allow discussion of "wicked programs" over more than one meeting. We also changed the name to Family Medicine Leadership Conference. Attached is a copy of the organizational principles we agreed to. The question is: how have we done? What has worked? What could have been done differently.

Then, as part of the thinking about the Milwaukee meeting, the FMLC planning group set aside some time for discussing what we might do differently in the future. I volunteered to draft a straw person for feedback. ABFM and its foundation have discussed this in the past, and I've talked with both Stacy and Shown as well as some in the ABFM leadership about this proposal, but what you see is intended to be a straw person version so people can react.

The key questions are:

- Should we change the format?
- If so:
 - Who should come?
 - How large should it be?
 - How should it be governed and financed?
 - How should the topics be chosen?

Also attached are the program and an introductory essay from the American Board of Internal Medicine Foundation Summer Forum from last weekend. The ABIM Foundation led the professionalism charter, the focus on COI of pharma in CME and education, Choosing Wisely and now the Trust initiative. The program gives you a sense of what they do; we would of course not be bound to this topic (reframing trust) but this will give you an idea of what they've done.

Look forward to the discussion.

Warren
